Ghana's Warrior Queen: Women's History Month Feature

As Women's History Month comes to an end, the Okyeame is honored to bring you the story of Yaa Asantewaa, Ghana's warrior queen.

Yaa Asantewaa was a member of the Asante royalty who led the Asante against the British in the war of 1900. The circumstances that led her to this role and the way she fulfilled it make for high drama. The British spent much of the nineteenth century trying to gain control of the inland areas of what today comprises Ghana. They encountered the stiffest resistance from the Asante people, led by a king (the Asantehene) in Kumasi. The Asante were determined not to allow foreigners to control coastal trade. On January 17, 1896, the British arrested the Asantehene, Nana Prempeh I, and his immediate family in an attempt to seize political control of Asante. First the British imprisoned the Asantehene in the Elmina castle. But the Asantehene's followers traveled to Elmina to continue supporting him. Then the British moved the Asantehene to Sierra Leone, but loyal Asantes made the trek to Sierra Leone to show their support. Finally, in 1900, the British moved the Asantehene and his entourage to the Seychelle islands to break the connection between the monarch and his people. The arrest and detention of the Asantehene left a leadership vacuum in Asante that Yaa Asantewaa would fill. In March of 1900, Governor Arnold Hodgson went to Kumasi and met with a number of the remaining Asante chiefs and Yaa Asantewaa. In the meeting, he demanded possession of the Asante's Golden Stool. The Golden Stool is a sacred object which is believed to contain the soul of the Asante people. Yaa Asantewaa took offense at the Governor's demand and decided to take up arms against the British. She is said to have remarked, "Tomorrow, ghost widows would get husbands." Yaa Asantewaa did not have the support of all Asante. Many chiefs believed the risks of war were too great. To them, Yaa Asantewaa said:

GHANA'S WARRIOR QUEEN: NANA YAA ASANTEWAA

How can a proud and brave people like the Asante sit back and look while the white man took away their King and chiefs, and humiliated them with a demand for the Golden Stool. The Golden Stool only means money to the white man; they have searched and dug everywhere for it. . . If you, the chiefs of Asante, are going to behave like cowards and not fight, you should exchange your loin cloths for my undergarments.

Yaa Asantewaa directed the Asante troops from March to November, 1900. It was a brutal war in which the Asante lost many men. The Asante won several important battles and almost succeeded in expelling the British. Only with reinforcements from Sierra Leone and Nigeria did the British prevail. During the war, the Asante hid the Golden Stool in a cave in Barekese and kept it under constant guard. The British never found it.

In November, when it became clear that the British were winning the war, Yaa Asantewaa went into hiding in the village of Sreso Tinpomu. The British offered a reward for her capture, and villagers eventually betrayed her. The British arrested the elderly woman and temporarily imprisoned her in the Kumasi Fort. Yaa Asantewaa ultimately joined the Asantehene in exile in the Seychelles where she passed away on September 11, 1921.

Today, Yaa Asantewaa is a symbol of resistance and pride to the Asante people and a vibrant character in Ghanaian history. You can learn more about Yaa Asantewaa by visiting Kumasi. The old Kumasi Fort today houses the Military Museum, where you can see the cell in which Yaa Asantewaa was imprisoned. You can learn more about the Asante monarchy by visiting the Manhyia Palace Museum. And you can learn about the origins of the Golden Stool by visiting the Okomfo Anokye Sword in Kumasi.

Cell phone companies are charging us $1.00 to $1.75 or more for 411 information calls when they don't have to. Most of us do not carry a telephone directory in our vehicle, which makes this situation even more of a problem. When you need to use the 411 information option, simply dial: (800) FREE 411, or (800) 373-3411 without incurring any charge at all. Program this into your Cell phone now.
